ABSTRACT

This Thesis is entitled "Clause as Exchange: The Mood Element in Anton Chekov's Short Story The Death of an Official in Selected Short Stories Book."

This Thesis has two objectives. They are: (1) It is aimed at identifying Mood Elements which are applied in Anton Chekov's short story "THE DEATH OF AN OFFICIAL" in Selected Short Stories Book, and (2) It is aimed to identify Mood Types which occur in Anton Chekov's short story "THE DEATH OF AN OFFICIAL" in Selected Short Stories Book.

The data were collected from Anton Chekov's short story in Selected short stories book. They were then segmented and analyzed qualitatively on the basis of metafunction theory. The segmenting clauses were analyzed to know the Mood Types of clauses.

The results of this study show that (1) the short story is the one of information negotiation rather than good and services negotiation which is made by declarative as the dominant appearance of the interactant, (2) declarative non-exclamative (declarative) was occurs more dominant than declarative exclamative with 171 or 93,3% and 1 (one) or 0,5% from all clauses.

It is concluded that the implication of the Clause as Exchange: The Mood Element is about the element of Mood Types on a clause. Mood Types were about Interpersonal relationships between speaker and addressee in conversation. It realized of Interpersonal Meaning. In English short story in Anton Chekov's short story "THE DEATH OF AN OFFICIAL" in Selected Short Stories Book, almost all of clause used Declarative. This indicates that clause of short story more dominant occurs to giving information.
