This research discusses metaphors used in 3 online articles of Japan's Baseball final game on 22 October 2016. It aims to find the meaning of vehicle, the meaning of tenor and the similarities between them. The method used in this research is qualitative method by using Alan Cruse's theory in his book "Meaning In Language", published in 2000. MIP (Metaphor Identification Procedure) is used to identify metaphors in the data. The data that identified as metaphors are classified based on the Japanese word classes and the topic of the sentences. All the data were analyzed in the form of vehicle, tenor and ground by adding further explanation about the context of the situation. There were 12 data in this research. It is concluded that to interpret metaphor expression, one needs to understand the context and culture of the said metaphors.
